Medical errors report released

ACH Alberta Health Services released the full report into four serious mix-ups at the Alberta Children's Hospital on Thursday after the health minister ordered it to be made public last week.

The 58-page report found two of the four errors could have been prevented if the board had implemented previous recommendations from other incidents.

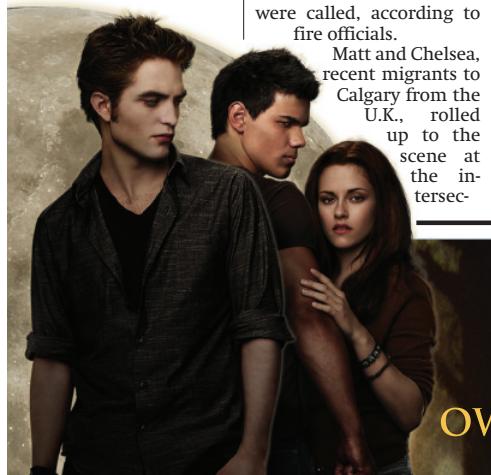

The Health Quality Council of Alberta report explored four errors that occurred in the same unit at the Alberta Children's Hospital in February and March 2009. METRO CALGARY

Zoo official quits after difficult few months

krista.sylvester@metronews.ca

RESIGNATION The beleaguered Calgary Zoo has suffered another blow as a top official has resigned effective immediately.

Cathy Gaviller, director of conservation, tendered her resignation effective Tuesday and Calgary Zoo spokesperson Simon Scott said the decision was hers alone.

"It is a personal matter and it was her decision. It is a huge loss for the organization and a huge loss for the zoo," he said.

Scott said the zoo is losing a "wonderful" member with over 20 years of experience.

"At the same time, we have to move on and see this loss as an opportunity for a new way of thinking. I think it's a signal a change is coming to the zoo."

Scott said the zoo would work to find an interim replacement before finding a permanent solution.

Gaviller said in a prepared statement: "I am very proud of what we achieved at the Calgary Zoo and of my contribution. The past few months have been very challenging for the organization and for me personally. I care deeply for the Calgary Zoo and hope my decision can help the zoo move forward confidently and begin a new chapter in animal stewardship."

Gaviller's resignation comes just days after a near gorilla escape and following years of highly publicized incidents, including several animal deaths.

City fire crews battled a stubborn, wind-propelled blaze yesterday afternoon at a southwest condo complex. It was estimated that more than 400 residents have been displaced as a result of the fire.

Fire consumes condos

Hundreds homeless after blaze engulfs top floor of SW complex

daren.krause@metronews.ca

Hundreds of residents were displaced from a southwest condo complex after fire gutted the top floor of the four-storey building Thursday afternoon.

Firefighters were called to the 159-unit complex shortly before 12:30 p.m., and once they arrived a second and third alarm were called, according to fire officials.

Matt and Chelsea, recent migrants to Calgary from the U.K., rolled up to the scene at the intersection

"In the span of 20 minutes the whole roof was on fire."

Dominik Aschauer, resident

tion of Millrise Drive and Millrise Boulevard SW, only to watch firefighters dousing the final hot spots in a fourth-floor condo next to the charred remains of their own.

"We were just getting things up and running, really, and to see this ... (is) devastating," said Matt.

The pair, who have lived in Calgary for nine months, said all of their belongings appear to be destroyed, except Christmas decorations and suitcases left in an underground storage. They said support from their work colleagues has already begun to pour in.

Third-floor resident Dominik Aschauer heard the fire alarm and went to his patio for a look. When he saw smoke coming from the roof and patio of a corner suite, the 24-year-old Earls server grabbed his tip jar and fled the building.

"In the span of 20 minutes the whole roof was on fire," said Aschauer.

"By the time I got outside ... (emergency services) was here. Really good for getting here on time."

The blaze may have started on the roof and quickly spread across the building, according to the fire department's Stephen Nichols. He indicated the building's roof had collapsed, but that damage was contained to the top floor.

It was estimated that more than 400 residents were evacuated as a result of this fire. Calgary Emergency Management personnel were working with residents to find alternate accommodations.

A firefighter was transported to the Rockyview General Hospital and he was considered stable with minor injuries. Five police officers who were exposed to smoke were treated by EMS.

No cause or damage estimate was available, and Nichols indicated fire investigators would be at the scene well into the evening.

Calgary cleaner, safer: Poll

But study finds only four in 10 feel safe downtown at night

krista.sylvester@metronews.ca

While the majority of Calgarians believe the city's core is safer now than a year ago, only four out of 10 in a survey feel safe in the core at night, according to a city-sponsored poll.

City officials on Thursday released the results of the Centre City Citizen Perception Survey conducted last November by telephone and found out how citizens feel about the cleanliness and safety of the city's core.

Nine out of 10 said they felt fairly safe riding the C-Train or walking on sidewalks and in parks during the day, but only four in 10 said they felt safe in those same areas at night. That concerns police Insp. Kevan Stuart, who says crime has actually dropped significantly in the past three years.

"Some people feel it's the same ... but our crime stats have decreased significantly in the past years and ... it's just conveying that message more effectively," Stuart said.

Stuart adds the police

The majority of Calgarians surveyed by the city feel the downtown core is a safer and cleaner place than it was one year ago.

The survey also shows 85 per cent of respondents are satisfied with the cleanliness of parks, streets, sidewalks and pathways, according to City Land Use Planning official Graham Gerylo.

"We hope to monitor (the results) over time and understand how those perceptions are changing and hope to see an improvement," he said.

"This is the first time we've asked this survey at this level, to find out how Calgarians feel in all the different places of the centre city."

The survey conducted by Ipsos Reid between Nov. 12 to 27, 2009 included a random sampling of 1,127 adult Calgarians and is considered accurate to within 2.3 per cent, 19 times out of 20.

Students march to legislature over tuition hikes

EDUCATION Hundreds of protesters marched from the University of Alberta campus to the steps of the legislature Thursday to voice their concern over rising tuition costs in Alberta.

Many of them were U of A students, joined by their counterparts from the University of Calgary and University of Lethbridge, who travelled to Edmonton earlier that day for the protest.

Concern rose when the University of Alberta asked Advanced Education Minister Doug Horner to allow for an increase in professional program tuition through what they called "market modifiers." In addition, they proposed levying an extra $550 in yearly fees from all students.

Drugs motive in SW slaying, police say

CRIME Police believe a man found dead Wednesday night in a southwest neighbourhood back alley was slain over drugs.

Homicide Staff Sgt. Rick Tuza said it appears the man in his 40s may have been meeting with a group of men when an altercation took place in the 900 block of 43 Street SW at 7:30 p.m.

"We do not believe this incident is random. We believe the combatants knew each other and we believe the incident was drug-related," Tuza said. "We have suspects in mind we just need to locate them."

The cause of death will not be released due to the pending investigation. The victim's name will not be released until next of kin is notified.

"We did recover some weapons at the scene we believe were related," Tuza said, though he couldn't specify what kind.

Police seek information about two men who fled the scene said to be in their late teens or early 20s. Police also executed a search warrant on a Cadillac found crashed at the scene.

Dina Crafts

As her uncle clings to life in a Calgary hospital, an Ontario woman is pleading for anyone with information about how he got there to come forward.

Dina Crafts and her mother, Nancy, flew to the city from London, Ont., to be at John Crafts' bedside after the 54-year-old man was taken to hospital on March 11. He remains on life-support.

"Mortified. Stunned. Couldn't believe it," the woman said of her family's reaction to news Crafts was found face-down in an alley with extensive head injuries.

"He's hooked up to a bunch of machines. If we take him off, he'll pass ... but they haven't said it's totally hopeless," she said.

"He'll never be the same."

The man's family said he couldn't stay away from Calgary, a city he loves dearly, and they want to know who would leave him in the streets to die.

Det. Mike Ruark said Crafts was found by a passerby just four blocks from his home in an alley in the 5200 block of 8 Avenue SE, but police don't have any evidence of how he got there.

"We don't know where it happened or what happened," he said, adding anyone with information needs to step forward.

PM briefs G20 negotiators

The G20 nations must keep trade markets open, strengthen banking regulations and nurture a sustained recovery from the world economic crisis, Prime Minister Stephen Harper says.

Those were the priorities Harper laid out for the "sherpas" — the senior bureaucrats who are holding two days of meetings in Ottawa to lay out the agenda for June's economic summit in Toronto.

Harper told the negotiators recovery is by no means fully assured.

He said the G20 will be judged by "its capacity to lead the world through recovery and beyond."

Harper said it's natural and expected for countries to defend their national interests, but they must take into account the long-term needs of the global economy.

Butts out in California state parks?

California lawmakers on Thursday were considering what is believed to be the nation's most far-reaching smoking ban in state parks as a way to get unsightly cigarette butts off the beach, eliminate second-hand smoke and reduce the threat of wildfires. Groups that track such legislation say no state prohibits lighting up throughout its entire park system, as the California bill proposes.

The plan would cost $940 billion over 10 years and extend coverage to 32 million Americans who are uninsured, while reducing the federal deficit by $138 billion over 10 years, the impartial Congressional Budget Office said, and continue to drive down red ink thereafter. Democrats said the deficit would be cut $1.2 trillion in the second decade.

Nafta trade dropped last year

ECONOMY Last year's collapse of the North American auto sector caused trade with the U.S. and Mexico to suffer its worst year since the North American Free Trade Agreement went into effect 15 years ago, the U.S. Transportation Department said yesterday.

Although trade ended the year on a good note, it fell by 23.3 per cent overall in 2009 compared with 2008.

That marked the largest annual decrease since NAFTA went into effect in 1994 as the value of products that were shipped by truck, rail and pipeline between Canada, the United States and Mexico dropped to $637 billion US in 2009.

Oil industry profits will rise to $8B: Forecast

No boom time return till 2014

Oil industry profits will see a big boost this year as some of the cost-dampening effects of the recession linger, according to a forecast by the Conference Board of Canada.

However, the business think-tank cautioned the price of labour and materials is poised to rise in future years as the pace of development picks up in the oil-sands.

"The recession had one positive effect — costs in the industry have come down precipitously," said the report released Thursday.

Numerous oilsands producers began to put their multibillion-dollar projects on hold in late 2008, as the recession whittled away at demand for fossil fuels and made it too costly for companies to borrow money. Investment in the sector contracted by 26.4 per cent last year, causing capital costs to decline at a similar rate, the Conference Board said.

Many of those delayed oil-sands projects have since been put on the front burner. Increased production from those projects, along with stronger crude oil prices, has led the Conference Board to predict oil industry profits of $8.1 billion this year.

That's two-thirds higher than the $4.9 billion the industry eked out last year, but still half what it raked in at the height of the boom in 2008. The Conference Board doesn't expect a return to boom-time profits of $16.1 billion until 2014, when crude prices are expected to be $114 US per barrel.

Recovery plays out in two gears

U.S. For the super-rich and everyone else, the economic recovery is taking place in two very different gears.

A British company is betting there's a market in North America for a $200,000 US sports car built with Formula One race technology, announcing Thursday that it will unveil the new toy late next year.

For most people, though, the economy's still a clunker. A new U.S. Labor Department report said more than 11-million Americans are now getting unemployment benefits. The number of first-time claims for unemployment fell last week for the third time in a row, a sign the job market is slowly healing. But claims remain above levels that would signal new jobs are being made. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Europe debates exit, expulsion from euro

CRISIS As Europe struggles to emerge from its fiscal crisis, a notion long considered taboo is gaining currency: Could countries be kicked out of the euro or be given an easy way to leave?

Germany's leader this week called for new rules that would allow for expulsion, and many people in debt-ridden countries like Italy and Greece are increasingly blaming the euro for their woes.

But monetary independence could be more curse than cure: Against dreams of devaluing to cheapen exports and boost economic growth may be a starker reality of catastrophic capital flight and paralyzing administrative headaches.

No more Shark bites

Fresh off their first win of the season against the Colorado Avalanche, the Calgary Flames have renewed confidence heading down the stretch drive.

They'll need to put that to the test when they host the San Jose Sharks on Friday night (Sportsnet West, 9 p.m. ET). San Jose is the class of the Western Conference, leading the way with a 43-16-10 record.

After dropping four straight 3-2 decisions to Colorado this season, the Flames (35-26-9) turned the tables on their Northwest Division foes Wednesday night and skated to a 3-2 win in Denver.

"It was against a team that we hadn't beat and it was a must-win," said Calgary forward Craig Conroy.

"It's just something to build on and now we've even got a better team coming tomorrow."

The Flames will now be looking to erase an ugly 9-1 loss to the Sharks in San Jose on Jan. 18.

Flames winger Nigel Dawes, left, and centre Craig Conroy steal the puck from Colorado Avalanche defenceman Ryan Wilson on Wednesday in Denver.

"That was an embarrassing one, they beat us pretty handily," Conroy said.

Since that devastating loss, Calgary general manager Darryl Sutter has given his team a facelift, adding forwards Jamal Mayers, Matt Stajan, Niklas Hagman, Christopher Higgins and Ales Kotalik, de-fencemen Steve Staios and Ian White, and goaltender Vesa Toskala.

"There's enough new faces here that they won't remember that and we'll be focused on what we need to do as a team and not so much worried about the past," said Mayers.

Canada loses in sledge hockey shocker

UPSET With the stage seemingly set for a third straight Canada-U.S. gold medal hockey showdown at the Vancouver Winter Games, the host country suddenly fell victim to a miracle on ice.

Japan, who had lost 11 straight games to Canada heading into Thursday's Paralympic semifinal, rallied from an early deficit and stunned the Canadians 3-1 to advance to the gold medal game. With the defeat, Canada will have to play for bronze.

"Canada would beat us if we played them 1,000 times, we're going to lose 999," said Japanese head coach Kojin Nakakita. "But not this one."

The Canadians were looking to complete the country's gold medal sweep after the men and women's Olympic hockey teams won their respective titles last month.

But the sledge team looked tense out of the gate, as players misfired on routine passes, shot wide on glorious chances, and took bad penalties.

The game was tied 1-1 late in the third when Canada got caught pushing for the winning goal.

Japan broke away on a 3-on-1 and Daisuke Uehara fired a shot past sprawling Canadian goaltender Paul Rosen to make it 2-1 Japan with just 73 seconds left.

Captain Jean Labonte, who at age 40 might have played his last Paralympic game, battled tears as he spoke afterwards.

"We had a lot of chances and we had them pinned down in their end quite a few times during the game and we couldn't capitalize," said Labonte, who helped Canada win gold at the 2006 Paralympics. "Hats off to them."

Canada will play the loser of the United States-Norway semifinal in the bronze medal game Friday night.

Sports in brief

NHL The NHL came down hard on James Wisniewski, handing the Anaheim Ducks defenceman an eight-game suspension Thursday for his hit on Chicago's Brent Seabrook. It's the longest suspension league disciplinarian Colin Campbell has handed out this regular season and comes at a time when the NHL is under pressure to make the game safer.

BASEBALL A day after acknowledging he failed a drug test for cocaine last year, Texas Rangers manager Ron Washington says he used marijuana and amphetamines while he was a player.

NHL The Bruins wasted little time retaliating against the Pittsburgh Penguins' Matt Cooke for his blindside hit that left Boston centre Marc Savard with a Grade 2 concussion.

In the teams' first meeting since Savard was hurt by a shoulder-to-head hit March 7 in Pittsburgh, Cooke and Boston's Shawn Thornton dropped their gloves at 1:58 of the first period Thursday night.

Soccer helped prisoners endure

FieldofPlay

Scott

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

here is a small, flat island 12 kilometres off the coast of Cape Town with an incredible soccer history.

Here the prisoners of South Africa's apartheid regime, including Nelson Mandela, broke rocks in a quarry as punishment for opposing racial segregation.

At Robben Island, the country's white minority went about the business of degrading leaders of the African National Congress, who they considered to be terrorists.

In the paltry library, prisoners found a FIFA rule book and devised a plan to play soccer in an organized fashion; partly as resistance, but mostly to endure.

The result was the Makana Football Association, which required every prisoner to take part as either a player or an official. The International Red Cross was an ally in pressuring Robben Island wardens to allow the men time for exercise.

The prisoners responded by grading their own fields and forming a three-division league, replicating the structure of international soccer at the highest level.

Today, Robben Island is a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Tens of thousands are expected to visit during this summer's FIFA World Cup. While the most high-profile soccer ever played on African soil will unfold at stadiums like Green Point in Cape Town, perhaps the most significant games took place on this barren island just offshore.

Gemini Award winner and author Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons.

The Bounty Hunter begins with Jennifer Aniston breaking free from the trunk of Gerard Butler's car. And once moviegoers see this film, the actress may consider crawling back in.

In this largely unfunny hybrid of a romantic-comedy/action flick, Butler plays Milo, an ex-cop turned bounty hunter who gets the call to track down his journalist ex-wife (Aniston) when she ditches out on a court appearance.

traces her simply enough but soon the pair find themselves involved in a mysterious unsolved case, being chased by loan sharks and oops! Falling in love all over again!

Yes, it's as cooked up as a date movie can get but it wouldn't suffer as much had the script at least delivered a few zingers. It doesn't.

Then again, Director Andy Tennant (Fool's Gold) isn't exactly known for a subtle touch.

Even so, trying to force a marriage of car chases and romantic-comedy may be the most questionable device.

In fact, even Butler and Aniston appear to realize this concoction isn't going anywhere and it strains their questionable on-screen chemistry.

Moreover, the absence of comedy is only heightened by a seemingly endless mix of music whose distracting placement could possibly be mistaken as the soundtrack to an entirely different movie.

Then again, that may have been just wishful thinking on my part.

REVIEW If you like seeing graphic close-ups of torsos being torn open to remove vital organs, then Repo Men is a movie for you.

It seems like that's all director Miguel Sapochnik was interested in filming in his debut feature as he fills the screen with bloody entrails every few minutes.

Unfortunately Sapochnik is bored by simple pleasures like clear storytelling and compelling characters because every scene that doesn't feature gore is lazily assembled and often incomprehensible.

Set in a world where corporations specialize in producing prohibitively expensive artificial organs that require payment plans, Jude Law and Forest Whitaker star as a pair of repo men assigned to involuntarily remove organs from customers who are late on payments.

The concept is ripped off of a Monty Python sketch, but is clever enough to deliver consistent dark comedy for about 20 minutes.

Unfortunately this is a feature length movie and once Jude Law gets his own artificial heart and faces off against his former employers, things get increasingly absurd to the point that any audience member with a brain will be forced to throw their popcorn at the screen out of sheer frustration.

It all climaxes with one of the most ludicrous scenes ever caught on film in which Law and his newfound girl-friend make out while tearing holes in each other to scan their artificial organs into a computer.

Simply put, Repo Men is a disaster.

Enter the Dragon movie

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Filmmakers Dean DeBlois and Chris Sanders know how to make a dragon movie. And the animators proved it by directing the newest family adventure to hit theatres — How to Train a Dragon.

In the 3-D-animated comedy (which is based on a popular series of kids' books), Canadian actor Jay Baruchel voices Hiccup, a bumbling young Viking who gains the respect of his family and friends after he trains a dragon — the dreaded enemy of the Norse (at least in this film).

So what exactly are the secrets to making an animated dragon movie? We got the answers when DeBlois and Sanders (Lilo & Stitch) recently visited Toronto:

First, make good source material your own.

"The world of the books differs considerably from what we did," said DeBlois who explained that they turned the author's "iguana-sized dragon" into a menacing black monster. "We needed one that was powerful and dangerous... (the studio) ultimately wanted a big fantasy adventure and so the elements were there but it took some hardline decisions."

Next, find a partner.

"(Chris and I) write together and we direct together and we just act as each other's toughest critics," explained DeBlois. "I trust his sensibility and he trusts mine... it's like two soul musicians who write better music together than they do separately."

The film also featured more than 300 crew members working over a brief 14-month schedule. "You have like fifty scenes out there at once that are in various stages of being produced so it's a marathon," added Sanders.

"You've got to keep your energy up so that's another reason to partner with somebody — there's just so much to do."

Finally, hire a great cast that includes Baruchel and Gerard Butler.

"They really worked their characters; they really want to get inside the heads of them," said DeBlois of a voice cast that also included talk-show host Craig Ferguson.

"It's a very draining thing strangely to stand in front of a microphone and do these lines over and over again and try to picture a scene that isn't really happening around you," added Sanders.

REVIEW

Sometimes you have to feel sorry for pint-sized young filmgoers. There are certainly plenty of movies out there for kids, but most of them are incredibly bland exercises made by adults trying too hard to ensure that they don't offend children's delicate sensibilities.

For the most part this isn't done to please kids, but their parents who want to be sure they aren't warping young minds.

This leads to countless projects like Diary Of A Wimpy Kid, a film that is sweet and has its heart in the right place, but offers no surprises.

Anything for Baumbach

Stiller just happy to work with director in Greenberg

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Ben Stiller had little trouble relating to his character in Greenberg — Noah Baumbach's new film about a misanthropic failed musician adrift in Los Angeles after a nervous breakdown — but he insists that's just because of a monumental birthday.

"I think a lot of people could identify with what he's going through," Stiller explains, tying Greenberg's neuroses to turning 40. "For me it was a big birthday — it's already a while ago. It's a point in your life when you go, 'Wow, I guess I don't have more ahead of me than I have behind me.'"

Heavy stuff for a film that's ostensibly a comedy,

Ben Stiller plays a failed musician in Greenberg, out next Friday.

but it's the warped worldview of the character that interested Stiller.

"It's a classic midlife situation, but it can be very hard for somebody who hasn't gotten to a place where they wanted to be," he says. "I think you'd be a little callous or have a pretty big sense of yourself to think that anybody's immune from that."

Midlife crisis talk aside, Stiller was mostly just happy to get a chance with writer-director Baumbach. "I'm a very big fan of his," he says. "I would've done probably any role he sent me. Movies like that don't come around that often."

Certainly 44-year-old Stiller, with a thriving career as an actor, a writer and a director, doesn't have to worry about relating to his character's lack of success. Everyone has goals, Stiller says, but it's important not to bog yourself down with them.

"I don't think you can do that to yourself and be a happy person. I think you just have to have a sense of where you're at," he says. "To me, the biggest thing that I'm trying to get to is just to be OK in the moment, just be OK where I am right now. Because that's the only place that I've ever found true happiness. Anything that's result-oriented never ends up being that fulfilling because it's not in the moment. That's the lesson that I keep on getting taught and trying to learn."

Zhanghua and Sugun Yang work brutal hours in a metropolitan sweatshop, sending nearly all of the money they make to their children in the county; returning home for Chinese New Year, the are greeted not as breadwinners but as deserters.

Eldest daughter Qin resents her parents' absence and retaliates by leaving home — an ironic response that's part adolescent hormones and part cultural inevitability.

That's absolutely a compliment, by the way — the intensity of the visuals match the seriousness of his subject, which is nothing less than the social and economic erosion of the world's largest national population.

Its portrait of a labour-class cut off from their do-

Fan's mobile camera catches a number of uncomfortable moments, but there's never any sense that his subjects are being exploited — the precision of the compositions is tempered by an underlying sense of empathy.

Satisfying thrill ride

The Ghost Writer

Director: Roman Polanski
Stars: Pierce Brosnan, Ewan McGregor
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●●½

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

It's difficult to watch Roman Polanski's grippy and enjoyable new thriller, The Ghost Writer, without being reminded of current events involving both the director and former British Prime Minister Tony Blair, on whom the film's Adam Lang (Pierce Brosnan) is obviously — if not explicitly — based.

It doesn't help matters that both Polanski and Blair have faced very high-profile legal challenges leading up to the film's release.

But even without the real-world signifiers, the film is a satisfying, stylish ride, showing once again that, legal and personal issues notwithstanding, Polanski is still a great filmmaker.

Of course, much of that is to do with author Robert Harris, who adapted the screenplay from his own novel, and stars Brosnan and Olivia Williams, turning in career-high performance as the embattled former PM and his wife under siege at a publisher's vacation home in New England while protesters chant outside the gates and charges from the International Criminal Court loom.

Into this mix is thrown Ewan McGregor as an unnamed ghost writer brought in to spruce up Lang's memoirs after the previous ghost writer's apparent suicide. McGregor's character is in over his head from the get-go, providing the Scottish actor's brow plenty of exercise.

The only real drawbacks to the film are the often garish digital effects — used by necessity since Polanski couldn't actually go on location to the U.S. or England.

It can be distracting when a great performance is given before a clearly greenscreened bay window overlooking the Atlantic.

Stella serves up a sensual taste of India

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada

FEATURE Don McKellar and Lisa Ray star in Dilip Mehta's Cooking with Stella, a fable set in the split world of New Delhi, India.

Ray plays a newly installed Canadian High Commissioner and McKellar's her stay at home husband; they have a tough time adjusting to the class system in their own home.

They live in the relative luxury of the diplomatic compound staffed by servants who live in the real, down-and-dirty New Delhi, including a cook named Stella who runs a black market business with Canadian supplies.

"It was great to be in India," says McKellar. "It's not the easiest city to explore; it's a chaotic city, but it's a sensual city. The cliché about India is true — it is very sensual with smells and sounds and noise. And touch! People touch you, there is no personal space. It's sort of overwhelming."

His character's relationship with Stella is a complicated one. She doesn't want him breathing down her neck while she bootlegs the Commission's food and supplies. She reluctantly agrees to be his cooking guru and uses her con game.

Filmmaker and photo-journalist Dilip Mehta nursed the idea for a story for years. He wanted to reflect a more realistic contemporary India.

"We have all seen the exotic, erotic and poverty films about India. But there is a 300 million strong middle class. Why aren't we doing stories about that? Because colour and poverty sell. If I said this about Slumdog Millionaire, you'd be talking about me in the past tense. I'd be dead."

"Greenberg has a SOUL, a HEART, and most importantly a SENSE OF HUMOR — not just about the world, but about itself!"

Atom power transforms Amanda

Seyfried perfect for Chloe, Canadian director says

RICHARD CROUSE
for Metro Canada

In Chloe, the new psychological thriller from Canadian director Atom Egoyan, Amanda Seyfried plays an escort hired by Catherine (Julianne Moore) to test her husband's (Liam Neeson) fidelity.

Following starring roles in Mean Girls, Mama Mia and the popular HBO show Big Love, this is her first real adult part. It's a complicated and showy role for the 25-year-old actress, and she credits Egoyan with pushing her to deepen the character by exploring every facet of Chloe's life.

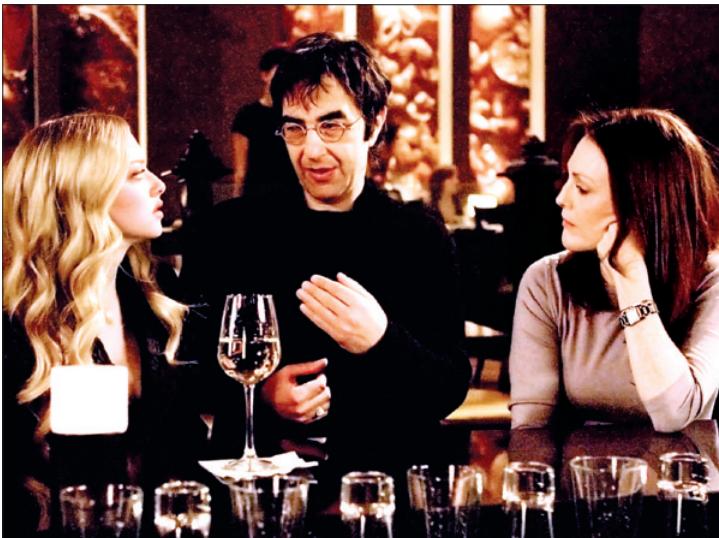

"It's a broad spectrum of emotions the audience feels about her," she says, "and in order to make the audience feel that way you have to play it right and in order for me to play it right I had to have Atom Egoyan.

"Mr. Egoyan," she continues, "is a genius and he's what good filmmaking is all about. I know it's going to be difficult for me to choose my next project based on what I just went through with him. It has raised the bar into a very high place."

It's obvious that Seyfried admires Egoyan, but it appears to be a mutual appreciation society. In a separate interview the director called the actress' audition "exceptional."

"There were a lot more famous people than her we considered but she was our gal," he said. "We knew that from the moment we did the audition. There was just something about her. Fortunately in the intervening period she suddenly became a star with Mama Mia."

Her star was on the rise before they made the film, but on the first day Egoyan had a moment of doubt.

"I have this reputation for hiring very young actresses," he says, "and the day she arrived in Toronto I thought, 'My God, she's a child. We've made a mistake.' But we needed the separation in age between Julianne (Moore) and her. That was really very important."

Any doubts were soon quashed when Seyfried went to work, however.

"She's a really good actress. She really grew into the role," he says.

"It's about a relationship you have with some actors. You feel like you are doing your job because you are able to ignite something they are capable of expressing. I don't mean to in any way objectify, but it's like working with a beautiful instrument. That's what she has."

Slash and burn

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

Something feels weird when I walk into Slash's hotel suite, and it takes me a few minutes to realize what it is. It's... immaculate.

No empty bottles of JD, piles of drug paraphernalia, dusty mirrors or half-naked groupies passed out in the corner. There isn't even any cigarette smoke. Instead, there's a very buff Slash, replete in his trademark leather top hat and sunglasses, sampling from a tray of fresh fruit and mineral water. It's 11:30 a.m. — early by rock star standards — but he's already been to the gym.

"How you doin', bro?" he asks with a firm handshake and flawless smile. "Please. Have a seat." He takes a spot on a sofa and leans forward, obviously eager to talk about what he's been up to.

I look around the room again. "So it's true. You HAVE quit smoking. No drugs, no drinking and now no smoking? It wasn't the Chilean earthquake that knocked the earth off its axis. I think it's you. You have meddled with the primal forces of rock 'n' roll, Mr. Slash."

He smiles sort of sheepishly. "Yeah, it's been 10 month since I've had a cigarette, which is the same amount of time that I quit during Velvet Revolver. So far, it's been good, although something could happen any second."

On April 6, Slash will release his first solo album, a self-titled project featuring an impressive array of guests vocalist that include the usual suspects (Ozzy, Iggy, Lemmy), some unusual choices (Kid Rock, Adam Levine from Maroon 5, Fergie from the Black Eyed Peas) and even a couple of old Gunners (Izzy, Duff). And, of course, Dave Grohl shows up on drums on one song.

"I wrote the music with specific voices in mind. When the music was done, I contacted the people I thought should sing the songs. They wrote the lyrics and the vocal melodies and then we recorded."

He's quick to sing the praises of people like Fergie and Levine. "She's a rock chick at heart and she's better than a lot of dudes out there. Adam came in and did this great falsetto performance in one take. He's amazing."

So no GnR reunion, ever?

"Why?" he says. "What would be the point?"

Battle of the Blades hits Sweden

The stage is set for retired Toronto Maple Leafs star Mats Sundin to join Battle of the Blades. Now it's just a matter of convincing the longtime NHLer to take part.

The show's executive producer John Brunton says the massively popular CBC-TV series, which begins shooting a second season in Toronto this summer, is bound for Sweden after inking its first deal to bring the Canadian format overseas.

"There's tons of great superstar hockey players in Sweden, even going back to our Maple Leaf Borje Salming," Brunton says of possible Swede contestants.

"Would we love to get Mats Sundin involved in our project in Sweden in some capacity, whether it's as a judge, or a skater, or in some way, shape or form? That would be a home run for us."

But it's early going yet. Brunton says the deal with Swedish distributor Sparks Network was finalized last week, and prospects for a Swedish Battle have yet to be determined.

However, he says the Swedish format would follow Canada's lead Mats Sundin from last year, when former NHLers including Tie Domi, Claude Lemieux and Bob Probert were turned into unlikely sequined sensations by pairing them with champion ice dancers in weekly competitions.

Former Edmonton Oiler

Craig Simpson and figure skater Jamie Sale won the inaugural competition, which featured Hockey Night In Canada's Ron MacLean and former skating champ Kurt Browning as hosts.

Swedish defenceman Alex Edler predicted the show could have legs in hockey-crazy Sweden.

"I think they'll (Swedish TV audiences) enjoy it if they get some good hockey players on there," Edler said during a Vancouver Canucks practice.

Actors take to the studio in a new season

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

James Lipton is legendary for the in-depth research he puts into every interview on Inside The Actors Studio.

But to hear him tell it, the secret to the TV show's success is the stuff he can't prepare for.

"We don't do pre-interviews with our guests. So when we meet on stage, it's for the first time. It's like a high wire act without a net," says Lipton, who begins his 16th season of hosting the Bravo series Sunday.

"The interviews are like self-portraits. The questions are meant to provoke an honest response. So I decided early on there would be no pre-interview. It forces us into a conversation."

Inside The Actors Studio returns for its 16th season on Bravo! on Sunday.

Still, as conversations go, Inside The Actors Studio can be pretty intense. Lipton claims he works two weeks, 14 hour days, in compiling that notorious stack of 400 question cards he uses during each and every interview.

"I sleep only a few hours a night, so that helps," says Lipton, who conducts the interviews in front of students from the Actors Studio Drama School in New York.

"But I edit the show as well. You only see a portion of the interview. Sometimes they go four hours and I have to personally shut it down. Otherwise, they'd go all night."

"The record was Barbra Streisand. She went to two-thirty in the morning."

This season's interviews are an eclectic mix that kicks tow (Superbad), to the voice cast of TV's Family Guy.

Lipton — whose age is listed in various sources as a surprising 83 — prefers to keep his birthday a mystery.

"This business is very ageist," says Lipton, whose six-plus decade resume includes stints as a poet, novelist, Broadway lyricist, soap opera writer, and actor.

"In my early acting days, I used to add years to my age so I'd be considered for leading man parts. Perhaps it's coming back to haunt me."

Entertainment

Pack leaders

Bright intimidates as New Moon's vampiric Alec

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

"If you're a leader you have to make difficult decisions, sometimes, and you have to be strong... and feared."

Cameron Bright, actor

Amidst its gooey layers of romantic delirium, last year's box office igniting Twilight sequel New Moon (arriving on DVD and Blu-ray this Saturday) had a few welcome additions to its vampire riddled mythology.

One was the introduction of a pack of testosterone powered werewolves; the other — more effective — bonus was the appearance of the dreaded Volturi, a black cloaked sect of ruthless, red-eyed aristocratic bloodsuckers led by Oscar-nominated actor Michael Sheen (Underworld, Frost/Nixon).

Hidden among the Volturi's pasty faced ranks was actor Cameron Bright. If the name doesn't immediately jump out at you, the face just might. Bright, now 17, is the former child star of such thrillers as the 2004 sci-fi shocker Godsend, the eerie Nicole Kidman melo-drama Birth and the over the top 2006 film Running Scared. In New Moon, he plays Alec, a powerful vampire who — like his intimidating brethren — is neither good nor evil.

"I see the Volturi as the government," says Bright.

"They're the leaders of the vampire nation, the

Twilight:

on DVD

ones who enforce the laws. And if you're a leader you have to make difficult decisions, sometimes, and you have to be strong... and feared."

And fear is what the Volturi trade in. Bright's Alec is at first glance, an almost cherubic figure, but one who wields the lethal ability to completely shut off his victim's senses, rendering them virtual vegetables. It's just another novel re-imaging of an iconic monster — the vampire — that has caused both the Twilight books and the films to be controversial amongst purists. "I think our vampires are really interesting," says the actor.

"We have a side history, something unique. Sometimes I hear people criticizing the way the vampires are presented in the film, the fact that we glitter and turn into diamonds but, here's the thing: vampires don't exist! We can portray them anyway we want to."

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton sallybrompton.comARIES*MARCH 21-APRIL 20

You feel you must do something to get your life moving again but you have no idea what it might be — a most frustrating state of affairs.

LIBRA*SEPT 23-OCT 23

If you are tense today it may be because you are worried about a financial matter. The problem may be minor but your mind has made it appear huge.

TAURUS*APRIL 21-MAY 21

Don't waste time agonizing about what you are doing and whether it is right or wrong. Everything is the right thing, so why worry?

SCORPIO*OCT 24-NOV 22

Do you go with the flow or do you try to impose your will on a situation that others have found difficult?

GEMINI*MAY 22-JUNE 21

If you go too far in one direction you will find that something pulls you back in the opposite direction and it may not be a pleasant experience.

SAGITTARIUS*NOV 23-DEC 21

You don't have to be sociable. You don't have to be the life and soul of the party. If you want to be alone with your thoughts today do it.

CANCER*JUNE 22-JULY 22

Look on the bright side and bright things will happen. Your mind is a powerful tool and should be treated with respect and used with caution.

CAPRICORN*DEC 22-JAN 20

It's not true that all Capricorns think that money and status are the most important things in this world, and even if you are one of those,

LEO*JULY 23-AUG 23

Is your conscience bothering you? Even if it is, there is no reason to believe you are about to be punished for what it was that you did.

AQUARIUS*JAN 21-FEB 18

You may not entirely trust a certain person but you have made a promise to support them and they are relying on you, so don't let them down.

VIRGO*AUG 24-SEPT 22

You know what you want to say but putting it into words is not so easy. But who says you have to be chatty?

PISCES*FEB 19-MARCH 20

Because you are not sure what you want it might be best not to make any decisions, no matter how much others urge you to get your act together.

Blind siding Ms. Bullock

AND AFTER THAT ACCEPTANCE SPEECH ABOUT PICKING THE RIGHT GUY ... DOESN'T IT MAKE YOU FEEL A LITTLE ILL? Sandra Bullock is reportedly set to split from husband Jesse James, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The Oscar-winning actress has been left heartbroken by allegations the motorcycle enthusiast cheated on her with tattoo model Michelle (Bombshell) McGee and friends say there is now no way back for the couple.

A source told America's OK! magazine, "Sandra is devastated. Jesse has tried to smooth things over with her, but to no avail. She's still leaving him."

According to People magazine, the 45-year-old beauty left the marital home on Monday and has since cancelled a planned trip to the UK next week to promote her movie The Blind Side — the film which won her the Best Actress Oscar.

On Wednesday, it was alleged James had enjoyed a fling with mother-of-two Michelle.

She claimed he had told her his marriage to the actress was over and romanced her while Bullock was away filming The Blind Side.

Daughter of a preacher man

THE WHITE GOWN GOES ON AND RELIGIOUS ROOTS COME OUT Katy Perry wants to get married in a church, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The singer — whose parents Mary and Keith Hudson are both Christian pastors — reportedly told her fiancé, British comedian Russell Brand, she wanted to tie the knot at a location close to her Los Angeles home, but turned down his suggestion of a recording studio at the Sunset Marquis hotel.

"Russell has been visiting the hotel for years and it is steeped in rock 'n' roll history," a source told Daily Mirror newspaper.

"It's in the middle of West Hollywood, but it has beautiful gardens and you feel like you are in some kind of tranquil paradise." "Katy was keen, but when it was suggested they could have their blessing in one of the recording studios, she put her foot down."

Although his request was rejected, 34-year-old Russell — who originally wanted to marry in India, where they got engaged on New Year's Eve — was not too upset and has told Katy, 25, he is willing to go along with her ideas for her dream day.

He didn't go down the Hall way

BUT THERE MAY BE SKELETONS IN THE CLOSET Director Sam Mendes is slamming a British tabloid report that his marriage to Kate Winslet ended because of an affair with British actress Rebecca Hall, usmagazine.com reports.

Following Monday's announced breakup of Winslet, 34, and Mendes, 44, after seven years of marriage, Britain's Daily Mail newspaper claimed that Mendes and Hall became romantically involved after meeting in

A rep for Mendes calls the charge "utter nonsense ... untrue and ridiculous."

The Vicky Cristina Barcelona star, Hall, 27, worked with Mendes on the 2006 indie Starter for 10

(which Mendes produced) and has collaborated on various theater projects.

Sources have told Us Weekly that it wasn't infidelity but career-related issues that caused Winslet and Mendes' marriage to unravel.

Mendes found his wife "overbearing" while they filmed Revolutionary Road together in 2007.

P. Diddy's 'Play-ahs'?

LET THE GAMES BEGIN P. Diddy has apparently become so obsessed with soccer that he's considering buying a British team, according to the Sun.

"Diddy was in London meeting football fixers a couple of weeks ago. The finance is in place, he's just deciding who he thinks he'll make a bid for," a source says.

"Portsmouth — who are also in severe debt — were mentioned, but he thought Palace were a better idea. He could cover their debt and bankroll a return to the Premier League. He liked the name as well."
